Guaje Pines Coluarium

Los Alamos needs an upgrade at Guaje Pines. There is a need for a colubarium to inter the ashes of residents who have been cremated. Currently there are two private columbarium at the United Church and the Episcopal Church to serve their membership.

Cremation is an increasingly more popular method of caring for the deceased. As of now the ashes are buried in a plot in Guaje Pines. At some point this cemetery will need to expand as more and more older residents pass qway. A columbarium would be a more cost effective way of intering ashes as is cremation. A columbarium would delay ecpansion of the cemetary and would provide for vaults to hold family urns in one place. Certaainly such an edifice would add to the government services supplied to our community and wiukd be more cost effective.

Capital outlay costs will need and the council will need to have staf assess size of the facility and financing.
