

Attachment C: Image of proposed locations east of Justice Building

The circle on the right is the former location of “Spirit Dance,” a small sculpture that was moved to the Guaje Pines Cemetery columbarium in 2018. The circle on the left includes a statue called “Apache Harvest” which is under consideration for relocation to the White Rock Senior Center, as well as unoccupied areas. These locations have been suitable for installed public art from a utilities perspective, and with careful placement choices they can also be suitable from a grass maintenance perspective (“will it be sprinkled?” and “can it be mowed around?”).
