

FINAL REPORT FROM SCOTT SCANLAND

Friday, April 05, 2019 12:30 PM

The First Session of the 54th New Mexico Legislature began on Tuesday, January 15, 2019 and ended on Saturday March 16, 2019. The Governor's 20 day signing period ended at Noon on April 5, 2019. You will find all the final actions on bills that we worked for you in your attached bill report. The bills that died during the Session are noted as FAILED. The final action of bills that went to the Governor are noted within each bill actions. She either signed them, vetoed them or pocket vetoed them. I try to get this report out on the day the signing period ends but there were delays in posting the final bills so I had to wait until I could read the line item vetoes in particular bills.

The Governor was presented with 309 bills. She signed 281 of those and vetoed 28 bills.

Here is a link to the final outcome of all the bills from this Session:

GOVERNOR'S ACTION ON BUDGET AND OVERVIEW ARTICLE

New Mexico Governor Michelle Lujan Grisham signs more than 250 bills, vetoes 28

Morgan Lee, Associated Press Published 10:07 p.m. MT April 5, 2019

SANTA FE - New Mexico Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham embraced a nearly $1 billion infrastructure spending package and enacted a variety of modest tax increases designed to insulate schools and state government from the state's boom-and-bust oil economy, as time ran out Friday at noon to act on new legislation.

In the final hours, the Democratic governor issued a flurry of 14 vetoes with letters of explanation aimed at keeping policy discussions alive through next year on parole reforms, bicycle safety, home delivery of beer and wine, and salary increases for the state's top elected officials — including the governor.

Nearing the finish, Lujan Grisham also approved a gun control bill aimed at ensuring that people under protective orders for domestic violence relinquish their firearms.

The bill is among several gun safety proposals that encountered opposition from dozens of sheriffs and allied county commissions outside of the state's major urban areas. Repeated revisions to the bill by lawmakers added a required "credible threat" finding by a court before a gun must be surrendered.

She authorized more than $900 million in direct state spending on capital projects that include a state crime lab and $16 million toward prison facilities. Smaller expenditures run the gamut from an apartment complex for the blind in Alamogordo to electric vehicle charging stations in Santa Fe.

Using her line-item veto authority, Lujan Grisham deleted just 1 percent of the capital projects viewed as unready and signaled a clean break with the austere budgeting of her Republican predecessor, Susana Martinez.

"This is truly a huge and historic investment," Lujan Grisham wrote in a signing message. "For the past eight years, projects that are necessary for small, rural and under-resourced communities in New Mexico have gone unfunded."

The vetoes and final bill signings put a bookend on a furiously busy annual legislative session that ended on March 15 with the approval of sweeping education reforms, redoubled spending on business incentives and approved proposals for pay increases of at least 4% across state government and 6% at public schools. Leading Republicans in the legislative minority complained of being stifled or left out.

Annual spending on public education would increase by about $450 million to $3.2 billion under a general fund spending plan signed by the governor.

Final say on the new administration's education plan may lie with a district court judge.

Responding to a lawsuit by frustrated parents and school districts, Judge Sarah Singleton has outlined the state's failure to provide adequate educations, especially for poor and minority students.

She set a mid-April deadline to begin evaluating the response from the state Public Education Department.

"I feel incredibly prepared to defend the decisions that we made and incredibly excited about the opportunities that are now presented," Lujan Grisham said Friday, describing a range of bills she signed.

Lujan Grisham approved most provisions of a bill that will expand taxes on internet sales, nonprofit hospitals, auto sales, e-cigarettes and allows higher income tax rates on upper-income households.

Explaining the rationale for tax increases in a time of state budget surpluses, Lujan Grisham said in a statement that the legislation "helps to diversify general fund revenues, providing a hedge against volatile energy markets on which our state depends."

She vetoed portions of the bill that might have reduced taxes on tobacco products.

The approved bill increases a tax credit for working families with children to offset effects of the 2017 federal tax overhaul.

Since the end of the legislative session, Lujan Grisham also signed reforms on gun control, oilfield regulations, labor rights and the state's first minimum wage increase in a decade, a gradual uptick from $7.50 an hour to $12 by 2023.

IT'S A WRAP!

Thank you again for your confidence in our abilities. Tennille Taylor remains the rock who organizes all. Thank you to Carrie Robin Brunder for the extra boots on the ground. This was our 34th year of lobbying and our 30th year of being a paid, professional Lobbyist. I feel truly blessed with great clients. You care about your causes and are leaders all in your fields. I am honored to be the selected member for the National Association of State Lobbyists, the only New Mexico lobbyist asked to be a member of this exclusive national group. Our motto is to work harder than anyone in the State Capitol. That's the reason for the 3:00am text messages and 6:00am phone calls and 11:30pm updates from the floor action. Please call me if you have any questions about this report or anything.

Now it's on to the interim committee work beginning in late May. I appreciate your support and stay tuned....
